The Mountain's Care

The mountain rises, vast and still,
A giant shaped by time and will.
Its crags and peaks, its gentle slopes,
Hold the echoes of human hopes.

Beneath its gaze, the world unfolds,
Stories of caring, soft and bold.
Hands that cradle, hearts that heal,
Love that builds a bridge of steel.

The mountain feels each tender deed,
Each whispered prayer, each planted seed.
Its river flows with gifts we share,
Its forests grow from human care.

And when the weight of life bears down,
The mountain offers steady ground.
A place to rest, a view to see,
The strength in shared humanity.

For like the mountain, love endures,
Through shifting winds, through trials pure.
Its strength is quite, vast and wide,
A peak where all our hopes reside.
